WEEKS ONE TO SIX

Your symptom tracker

A simple place to notice how food, timing, sleep and stress show up in your day. A few honest notes are enough. You are looking for patterns, not perfect records.

How to use your tracker

1. Note it soon after.
   Jot down what you ate and when, close to the meal, while it is fresh.

2. Rate how you felt.
   Use a simple 0 to 5 scale: 0 is settled and comfortable, 5 is very uncomfortable.

3. Check in at night.
   Two minutes before bed: sleep last night, stress today and one thing that helped.

4. Review once a week.
   On Sunday, look back and circle anything that seems to repeat.

5. Change one thing.
   Try one change for a few days before you decide whether to keep it.

The comfort scale

0	1	2	3	4	5
settled	barely there	mild	noticeable	strong	very uncomfortable

If you notice blood in your stool, unexplained weight loss, pain that wakes you at night or anything that worries you, speak to your GP before carrying on.

FOOD, TIMING AND HOW YOU FELT

Daily log

Week of _____ This week I am trying _____

Day	Meals and snacks	Times	Felt 0-5	Notes
Monday
Tuesday
Wednesday
Thursday
Friday
Saturday
Sunday

Tip: you only need the meals that matter to you this week. Leave a cell empty if a day got away from you.

TWO MINUTES BEFORE BED

Sleep and stress check-in

Sleep and stress both change how digestion feels. Rate each from 1 (low) to 5 (high).

Day	Bedtime	Woke	Sleep 1-5	Stress 1-5	One thing that helped
Monday
Tuesday
Wednesday
Thursday
Friday
Saturday
Sunday

Calming things to try before meals

- Three slow breaths before the first bite
- A ten-minute walk after dinner
- Put your fork down between mouthfuls
- Screens off half an hour before bed

PATTERNS YOU NOTICED

Weekly review

What felt better this week?

What seemed to follow certain meals or times of day?

How did sleep and stress line up with how you felt?

One change to keep, and one to try next week

Notes for your practitioner